Imagine this. You just got out of a speech class in Thompson-Clark Hall, and you are on your way to an important biology lab in Hoyt when you meet an obstacle. You're in a wheelchair, and you do not have the strength to push through the door connecting to the McKelvey Campus Center. You later meet other obstacles, including steep hills and faulty elevators, on your way, and you are now late! As Westminster's resident wheelchair user, this is my daily reality. One of the daunting factors in choosing Westminster was the fact that the college was willing to collaborate with me in regard to accessibility needs. Though the accessibility of Westminster's campus goes far beyond that of some other small, private colleges I considered, there are still many improvements to be made in order to ensure that each and every student can make the most of his or her time as a Titan.

Many criteria that prospective students use to make their college decisions are subjective and negotiable. However, the physical ability to function as a student is a key determinant in the college decision of someone in my position. A student may be able to apply for additional scholarships to make a pricey school within their reach, but no amount of smiling at the automatic door opener in the back of Patterson Hall will make it functional. Additionally, no matter how far I stretch, the automatic door opener in the back of Patterson Hall will not work for me. Imagine this: You just got out of a speech class in Thompson-Clark Hall, and you are on your way to an important biology lab in Hoyt when you meet an obstacle: There is no automatic door opener to get into the shop door over a makeshift plywood ramp. If my small wheelchair were any larger (most are!), it would be physically impossible for me to enter the Student Health Center of all places! This should be a priority because it would open up opportunities for the community to be enriched by a plethora of diverse perspectives and experiences. The 2017-18 Inquiry textbook states in the Statement on Liberal Learning that it is our responsibility to acknowledge diverse perspectives to enrich one’s own worldview.

By its nature, therefore, liberal learning is global and pluralistic. It embraces the diversity of experiences and ideas that characterize the social, natural, and intellectual world. To acknowledge such diversity in all its forms is both an intellectual commitment and a social responsibility, for nothing less will equip us to understand our world and to pursue fruitful lives.

By this logic, it is the responsibility of the college, and the Westminster community as a whole, to make the school as accessible as possible to students with disabilities. Doing this is the only way to truly provide the college’s definition of a liberal education and hold true to our values as an institution.

Improving the accessibility of Westminster’s campus would not only benefit permanently disabled students such as myself. Injured athletes also stand to benefit from making the campus easier to navigate from a wheelchair or on crutches. There will almost always be injured athletes who face new obstacles in regard to navigating campus. Additionally, every one of us, as potential to become disabled, either temporarily, permanently, or from old age. Therefore, the accessibility of our school and our community is of concern to all of us.

The fact that Westminster has been responsive to my needs as a student with a disability is a good sign that improvements can be made. This is only possible through meaningful dialogue. On Tuesday, October 17th at 7pm, the Disability Awareness Club is showing a documentary about disability rights issues. Afterward, there will be a panel discussion with students who have disabilities or significant athletic injuries talking about the issues they face in society and on Westminster’s campus. I urge you to come and be part of the solution. There will be cookies, and it is a co-curricular event. I hope to see many people there to start a dialogue about these important issues.

Last weekend I spent a few days exploring Washington, D.C., a town rich in history and culture, which provided a wealth of opportunities for leisure and learning.

During my stay, I visited various landmarks such as the Lincoln Memorial, the National Museum of Natural History, and the Smithsonian Institution. I also enjoyed exploring the city's vibrant street art scene and sampling the local cuisine.

One of the highlights of my trip was a visit to the National Portrait Gallery, where I was able to appreciate the works of some of America's greatest artists. I was particularly drawn to the portrait of President Abraham Lincoln, which served as a powerful reminder of his legacy.

In addition to the cultural experiences, I also had the opportunity to witness the city's unique landscape. Washington, D.C. is situated on a peninsula, and the Potomac River runs through the center of the city, providing a beautiful backdrop for my explorations.

Overall, my trip to Washington, D.C. was a memorable experience that I will cherish for a lifetime. It was a chance to learn about the history and culture of the United States, while also enjoying the beauty of the city's natural surroundings.
Staying Humble and Kind

For our readers who don’t know me, I am a 49-year-old undergraduate majoring in Music Education here at Westminster. The reason for that statement will become clear shortly.

The lyrics to the Tim McGraw song “Humble and Kind” (sung by Lori McKenna and published by Universal Music Publishing Group) have been running through my mind a lot recently.

*Hold the door please say thank you
Don’t steal, don’t cheat, don’t lie
I know you get on your mountains to climb*

I have yet to make it a week this semester where at least one unheard bonding moment about my sex hasn’t caused me to question what I am doing here. Don’t get me wrong, a good 95% of my encounters have been positive and I think that is what makes those other rare encounters so difficult for me to process.

I am grateful to have some fantastic instructors. I look forward to working closely with them all during my time here. But most of the experiences I have had here have been with faculty or staff. One or two of those were supposed to be bonding moments, but there were any number of people here at Westminster I am not on a first name basis with. I have learned that it is better to let it be.

Thursdays is similar in concept to Gaelic Football, but incorporates concepts of American football and hurling. Players hold “buttons” short sticks used to bounce, hit and transport the ball down the field. For a scoring outline of that of Gaelic Football.

Brogie, cricket, and golf also take prominence in Northern Ireland. The Northern Ireland Men’s Rugby Team won the world championships just prior to Thompson coming to Westminster in August 2017. The Northern Ireland Mixed Rugby Team has qualified to compete in their world cup competition during the summer of 2021.

Thompson到时候 will be assistant to the Westminster Men’s Rugby team. He will be responsible for assisting the head coach, Tom Britton, during training and in competitive matches. Thompson has been with the team for two years, and in that time he has had the opportunity to travel to Ireland, Scotland, and England to compete in international matches.

If you are interested in finding out more about WHIG, you can contact any of us via email. Matt Causer, Tiffany Yearsley, Colin Campbell, or myself. If you have any questions or ideas for the lecture, please feel free to contact any of us as well.

Need a Hair Piece? WHIG Can Help!

Dominic Bonito

Are you fascinated by the past? Do you ever think about what life was like many years ago? Ever wonder how famous figures in history lived their day to day lives? If you answered “Yes”, then you are a perfect candidate for WHIG. The Westminster History Interest Group, or WHIG, has been around since 2004. Thanks to the help of Mr. Pittman, I was able to properly research the history of a king. How awesome!

WHIG may seem like a history academy piece, it is true, but when I joined WHIG, I am referring to the history group. WHIG is a club on the Westminster Campus that is not affiliated with the Westminster History Interest Group. Any member of the club can propose an event. WHIG is a club run by students, for students.

This year, WHIG has seen a growth in membership. New member Colin Campbell is a senior history major who was interested in taking trips sponsored by WHIG. At our first meeting, Colin had great ideas for the lecture. Colin spoke about the unique environment the lecture was going to be held in, the carriage collection in the museum, and the location of the museum. This good opportunity is quite flexible and open to student ideas. As long as a lecture can be located in one of the campus facilities, any event can happen. WHIG encourages students to participate and make plans. WHIG offers a unique way to learn and explore history.

One of WHIG’s first events was a trip to Gettysburg. This past spring, a large group of students attended this event. To WHIG, this trip was the museum free. Other events that WHIG offers are annual lectures. Any member of the club can propose an event. WHIG is a club for students, by students.

This summer, WHIG has taken trips to get a large turnout. Colin spoke about the lecture, the trip, and the benefits of WHIG. Colin stated that the trip to Gettysburg was important because the trip was free. Colin also spoke about the trip to Gettysburg being an opportunity to see a unique environment. Colin also spoke about the unique environment the lecture was going to be held in, the carriage collection in the museum, and the location of the museum.

I mention WHIG, I am referring to the history group. WHIG's goal as a club is to provide Westminster students with the opportunity to explore history. If you answered “No” to any of these questions, well, stop reading. You are not interested in anything we have to offer. You are neither interested in learning about history, nor do you care about the past. If you answered “Yes” to any of these questions, well then you are interested in the Gettysburg. If you are interested in learning about history, go out to Brett Ballagh and choose the history group, OR WHIG. If you are interested in learning about history, go out to Brett Ballagh and choose the history group, OR WHIG. If you are interested in learning about history, go out to Brett Ballagh and choose the history group, OR WHIG. Having sold over four million albums, Trumpeter Chris Botti has acquired a Grammy for "Best Pop Instrumental Album," and has had four Number 1 albums on Billboard’s Jazz Album Charts. Botti is known for his collaboration with performers such as Tony Bennett, Lady Gaga, Steven Tyler, John Mayer, Sting, Branford Marsalis, Yo-Yo Ma, Andrea Bocelli, and Frank Sinatra. After performing in some of the world’s most prestigious concert halls, Botti will be coming to spend an evening with students on behalf of Westminster College’s Celebrity Series. The performance will take place in Orr Auditorium on October 21st.

The show is on Saturday, October 21st, and will begin at 7:30 pm. Tickets can be purchased by visiting Westminster’s website, by phone at 724-946-7354 or 724-946-7120 or mccoyda@westminster.edu. The show is free for any Westminster College student who would like to attend, and is also available for purchase by the public at the box office or online at https://www.westminster.edu/celebrity-series.

Dr. Angela Lahr is on deck to present in next week’s Faires Faculty Forum on Wednesday the 18th in Mueller Theater during the lunch hour from 11:40-12:30. Answering the question: "What does a Catholic Worker look like today?" Dr. Lahr will discuss the history of the Catholic Worker Movement, which was founded with the intention of assisting and aiding the poor. Dr. Botti also has a long collaboration with Chris Botti, who will deliver a show sure to amaze all who attend. Botti’s passion in the areas of melody, space and balance in music creates something very unique and particular in his sound. The creative expression he exhibits in his music breaks the bonds of any genre. Chris Botti has been described as one of the most versatile performers. His musical career began at a young age with his mother, a concert pianist, encouraging him to pursue music from a very young age. His mother at one point even hired him as a musician, a task which she did accept. By the end of her life Day was not only pricking consciences with her words but with her actions. The letters explained that it was her personal policy to refuse such honors… I started searching through Day’s Catholic Worker articles. Dr. Lahr is excited to share her work with faculty, students and community members. She is looking forward to seeing new faces, students and faculty at the presentation. Dr. Lahr says her "also" moment comes when she read the Day letters that refused awards and honorary degrees, which is why she has dedicated hundreds of hours to reading her work. The presentation will also explore some ethical questions that Dr. Lahr has asked as a historian while researching this project.

Dr. Angela Lahr is on deck to present in next week's Faires Faculty Forums on Wednesday, October 18th. Social activists Dorothy Day and Peter Maurin, who jointly founded the Catholic Worker Movement, are the focus of Dr. Lahr's presentation. Dr. Lahr encourages anyone interested in learning about history or how the use of consciousness in the American past can help to contribute to attending to the faculty forum to learn more.

Dr. Lahr says that the Catholic Worker Movement was founded with the intention of assisting and aiding the poor. In particular, it had an all-important desire to care for those who are shunned by society. The movement was also helping the poor by building houses, which provided a convict precedent unknown to them due to its industrial character. This movement was called "growing communities," and also sought to establish farming communities in rural areas, but it also published a newspaper, edited by Dorothy Day, entitled The Catholic Worker.

Dr. Lahr says her "also" moment comes when she read the Day letters that refused awards and honorary degrees, which is why she has dedicated hundreds of hours to reading her work. The presentation will also explore some ethical questions that Dr. Lahr has asked as a historian while researching this project.

Homecoming Court 2017
On the eve of Wednesday, Sept. 27, Indiana University student Lukas Carl var, was rescued from Sullivan Cave, a short distance south of Bloomington, the student had been trapped there accidentally during a school-sanctioned spelunking trip that the institution Caving Club took over the weekend. He was rescued from the care of the president of the club due to Carl’s absence. Following the rescue, Carl was reported to be in good mental standing and has enjoyed a sound recovery from the 6-hour abandonment.

“I was very confused and frightened,” said the 19-year-old Friedman. “It took me a little while to realize my location and sort of approach things logically, usually, to come up with a game plan for every situation I face,” he said.

Carl said he was very grateful to be freed from his ordeal and to have survived the experience. He thanked his rescuers and the club for their efforts and expressed his gratitude for their solidarity and support.

Carl’s survival and has been practiced by many people in similar situations. It’s possible for a surviving person to return to their normal activities and be able to lead a normal life. The experience can be life-changing and has been shown to have a positive impact on mental health.

Carl’s experience proved to be very stressful and tiring, taking perspective from a worldly standpoint. Carl, who was very well-prepared, had his friends and family in mind as he thought about the supplies he had with him. Carl’s survival tactics included keeping himself alive by drinking water and eating food, and making use of shelter.

In the sort of situation, it is crucial to have a game plan and to stay calm. Carl’s survival tactics included staying focused and keeping a positive mindset.

Carl’s survival efforts are an example of how preparation and mental resilience can help individuals overcome difficult situations. Carl’s story serves as a reminder of the importance of preparedness and mental strength.

On Oct. 4, 2017 the Wreathoplet Maple House of McKey Awarded Dr. David W. Goldberg lecture on the integration of Nietzsche’s three historical perspectives. Goldberg gave this lecture after earning the 2017-2018 Henderson Lecture Award. Goldberg came to the college in 2002 and is currently a professor and the program coordinator in Philosophy.

The Henderson Lecture is started in order to recognize faculty in their original discipline and other thought leaders. For winning, a faculty member annually should choose the award. The lectures are all open and open to the community.

Many of the Caving Club’s ex-presidents have had an impact on the club’s culture and have contributed to the club’s success. Through their leadership and guidance, these presidents have helped the club to grow and succeed.

Hundreds of Thousands Protest for Catalan Independence

Matthew Grace

Will Spain soon be split into two different nations? This has become a greater possibility as the people of Catalonia, a region of Spain and a former kingdom, have voted overwhelmingly for independence from Spain.

According to a report by the Guardian, over 90 percent of Catalans voted in favor of independence in a referendum called by Carles Puigdemont, the leader of the Separatist movement in Catalonia. The vote for independence put the legitimacy of Spain’s government in question, leading to increased violence and uncertainty. The question for Spanish ministers and the leaders of the Catalan Separatist movement is whether they will vote for independence on their own authority?

The Associated Press reported Sunday that hundreds of thousands of demonstrators crowded the streets of Barcelona to protest the attempt by the Catalan government to move for independence. It is unknown exactly how many people took part in the protest as organizers have said that 900,000 people were in attendance while the police have placed that number at 500,000 people. According to AP sources, protesters marched down streets carrying Spanish, Catalan, and European Union flags to send a message to the government that they will not rest until Spain’s central government agrees to let Catalonia’s people determine their future.

The move toward Catalan independence has also had significant financial costs for Spanish banks. According to the New York Times, a number of large banks located in Catalonia have vacated their facilities in expectation of violence. The Spain’s financial system is large and is the third largest in Europe.

The Spaniards have made it clear that they do not accept the referendum as legitimate. Spanish Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy flatly said on Saturday that he would not call for a constitutional referendum to remove Catalonia’s autonomous status if it declared independence, according to the Daily Telegraph. Under current laws, the prime minister can navigate through the constitution in order to do so. Such a process would also eliminate the regional government and would put into motion a new section of sections. "I don’t think that that will happen within the legal framework," said Rajoy. "I think it would be necessary to apply emergency solutions but I’m not sure that not happening would have to be changed," said Rajoy.

Despite these threats by the national government, Catalan independence leaders have said they will continue their process for separation. "The course we must now take is to separate the two things done together, as we have done with the path that has taken us here. We must continue in integrity, because we want to tell the world, we want to tell all the Elites and all the intransigents in the world that the will of the people is unmovable and we are not going to let violence and outside a state that is not capable of offering any convincing reason other than the use of brute force!"

Tragedies in the Pittsburgh Area

Danielle Grady

There have been several tragedies reported by the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette that have occurred in Pittsburgh and the surrounding areas this month outside of car accidents, the tragedies are explained from most to least serious.

A fire broke out at the Unity Township maintenance building Sunday, 1, according to WPXI. According to the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Pennsylvania State Police are saying that the fire that destroyed millions of dollars of heavy equipment was set intentionally.

According to WPXI, workers rushed into the building to try and save as many pieces of equipment as they could before the building was overtaken with flames. The building, according to CBS Pittsburgh, was destroyed after firefighters extinguished the fire.

Police reported that the fire caused $4 million to $5 million worth of damage. WPXI explained that the fire is currently under investigation with help from the community.

The second tragedy involves the new school building and equipment that will be needed as the school continues its construction.

in the future after graduation once the student has a full-advantage the article mentions is the ability to invest more before graduating, the potential of their current investment that college students should invest before graduation. Some students, many reasons are listed that support the notion.

A word that is often tossed around, and heard on college campuses is, “When should I start investing?” and the answer is essentially: “as soon as possible.”

Another aspect of investments to consider is diversification. It is important for all people looking to invest, not just college students, to diversify their investments. The saying “don’t put all of your eggs in one basket” applies to this concept because investing in similar markets can cause a good loss for that particular market fall. Diversifying in other markets simultaneously helps mitigate the loss.

The next step is determining whether to invest through managed investing or self-directed investing. Managed investing is when investors give their capital to an intermediary party that is in charge, and was created for those who may not currently have the capital to invest, or want to learn more about a certain market. This specific game gives participants the opportunity to compete with over 70,000 others from a variety of backgrounds, and provides each participant with $100,000 in virtual cash. This game simulates activity that is actually occurring in the market to give competitors real-life information on any security. Investopedia Stock Market Game is a great resource for college students who are interested in investing to get their feet wet in the investment world, and gain an understanding of how investing works.

On the other hand, bleh is exactly what I named it: bleh. Its just not my go to meal. Its a name you thought you wouldn't have read today, but you did. Haven't seen those two movies: “Tenacious D in the Pick of Destiny” . He has a beautiful duet with Jack Black. Also Meatloaf is an icon in music in the 00s but it is not the same as his earlier works. Meatloaf is an iconic singer of the 70s, 80s, and somewhat the 90s. He has released some songs. You have most definitely heard some of these songs somewhere in your travels. In fact, two of his songs have been featured in movies: “Paradise by the Dashboard Light”, “You Took the Words Right Out of My Mouth” .

I will name 5 songs of his that you probably, definitely, almost hand down did not know was him. “Paradise by the Dashboard Light”, “You Took the Words Right Out of My Mouth” , “I’ d Do Anything for Love” Tuesday in the TUB. I love Meatloaf. His music is very diverse. He is very quotable. He is an influential musician. He is very much alive in his music. He is very passionate. He is an influential musician who has contributed so much to the music world. He is definitely worth a listen. He is so good at what he does. His music is unforgettable. He is a name you thought you wouldn’t have read today, but you did. Haven’t seen those two movies: “Paradise by the Dashboard Light”, “You Took the Words Right Out of My Mouth” .

As baseball season and summer draw to a close, hockey season and winter quickly approach. The weather, just like the competition, has yet to settle in—up to the collar. This 2017-2018 season in the hockey league’s 100th and the excitement is anything but dying down on the ice. Beginning last Wednesday, it is projected to be a year of great teams and triangles for the 30 teams which make up the league.

Last year’s Stanley Cup champions, the Pittsburgh Penguins, did get off to a great start, losing 10-1 to the Chicago Blackhawks. While this means little in the long run, the defeat was certainly shocking. While it might seem to bode well for the Blackhawks, their loss of many key players doesn’t set well and could just be a fluke. The Pens are still expected to do well this season, despite the loss of Marc-Andre Fleury, Matt Cullen and Nick Bonino. Their prospects of being the league’s champions for a third straight year are lowered by the departures of these three key players and others, but not legit—they actually still are still quite a threat. Any team with as much playoff and championship experience as the Penguins is a serious contender despite the loss of such great talent.

Fans have proven themselves to be the acclimated players through tweets. Fans know him to be with the new team, the Las Vegas Golden Knights, but he knew him to be with his new team, the Penguins.

Over the past couple years, the popularity of e-sports has really skyrocketed. Dozens of players have turned pro and have become household names. One interesting fact is that e-sports are finally taking a toll on his body. He has even mentioned a few times quitting the game because of his health. During an interview, he had this to say about what he plans to do moving forward: “I’ve been pushing myself really hard so far because my fans have been very supportive, and I’ve been trying to keep up with the game and all the new technology coming out every day. I want to be the best at everything and be able to keep up with the fans and their expectations. I’ve been working on my speed, my accuracy, and my reflexes. I’ve been focusing on improving my reaction time and my hand-eye coordination. I’ve been really pushing myself to improve my skills and to reach the highest level possible.”

To these fans, this is most definitely a real sport, but some have a hard time wrapping their heads around the fact that a sport is being played online. While these are some of the reasons, e-sports are also a great way to showcase individual and team skills. They also provide a platform for those who want to compete against each other to win a variety of different online games. This means that anyone can join, regardless of their skill level or experience. Some of the most popular games in the world are Call of Duty, League of Legends, and Dota 2.

The Tampa Bay Lightning have had great prospects for this year. Stacked with good players and an overall leadership at the helm, this team should have performed better than last year. With captain Steven Stamkos injured and a poor record in January, they were fighting an uphill battle for a significant part of the season. With Stamkos back in action, a strong leadership can guide this team to the right path in the playoffs.

Some of the Canadian teams in the league are doing a lot of promise this time around. The Calgary Flames have strengthened their Rimmer defenses, the Toronto Maple Leafs have improved their competition in their division and the Edmonton Oilers with their new additions, Connor McDavid and Leon Draisaitl, have fantastic opportunities before them. While this short analysis by no means encompasses the entirety of the league, nor does it have too much to base judgments upon other than speculation, it attempts to identify the major teams to lookout for in this year’s battle for the Stanley Cup. With one hundred years under its belt, the NHL still has much to offer in terms of entertainment value. The addition of a new team this season and the league’s popularity have kicked off for hockey in North America. With high interest and much to offer and relatively little determined for the future, this season should prove to be one for the books.

Remember the Titans

Brett Bartholomew

Saturday, September 30, 2017 marks a date in Titan athletic history that will be remembered for years to come. The date consisted of a boost to head football matchup between Westminster College and the esteemed Thomas More. Westminster College football has not had a victory against Thomas More since 2004, and they were not about to let what could possibly be their last game against Thomas More slip through their hands.

On the first possession of the game the Titans were able to find the end zone thanks to a one-yard run from Senior Kaitlin Kim. Thomas More's quarterback responded by going in the air for an eight-yard touchdown pass with 5:44 left in the first half. Westminster answered right back with a seven-yard touchdown run by senior quarterback Paul Colombato, making it a 1-7 lead for the Titans.Wyck's successful point after attempt.

Thomas More tied the game in the third quarter with a 10-yard touchdown run. The Saints landed themselves into field-goal range early in the fourth quarter, but Titan senior defensive tackle Tyler Bovilla blocked the attempted kick with Marvin Liberiste recovering the kick at the Westminster 42-yard line with 8:26 left in regulation. Westminster's 62-yard drive was fueled by its very own senior running back Jametrius Bentley who ran a 23-yard reverse to the Thomas More 20-yard line. Colombato added another rushing touchdown with a seven-yard score and Cybak converted on the extra point to give the Titans a 21-13 lead with 8:00 left to play. Thomas More scored from three yards out and converted the point after to tie the game up, 21-21, with 2:27 left in the fourth quarter.

The Titans utilized Colombato's impressive speed, including a 36-yard third-down run to get into Saints' territory. Cybak missed the potential game winning 39-yard field goal as time expired, putting the game into overtime. Westminster won the toss and deferred, running the ball on their first possession in overtime. Finally, the most exciting part was the successful field goal by Cybak off to give Westminster the win.

Westminster College's Head Football Coach Scott Benzel gave a summary of the team's hard preparation as well as his thoughts during and after the game. "We prepared like we have for every game, however we emphasized our past games against Thomas More and really tried to show our players the areas where we went wrong and ways in which we can fix it. Another thing that helped us was playing #15 William in our opener because they had defeated Thomas More last year in the playoffs. I expected an evenly matched, hard fought football game full of physical run attacks and aggressive defensive plays. Our defense was what made us similar with that of Thomas More, which made for an interesting matchup. Our defense had a hard time consistently stopping their running game and their running back is one of the best in the country in my opinion. Offensively overall, I thought we may have missed on a few big plays but we moved the ball very consistently. We can all be proud of Westminster College's defense that held the Saints to just 76 passing yards. On time and on target the Titans were well on their way.

Tom Hohenstein, who announced the game, expressed: "The game itself was filled with exciting moments, narrowing it down to a few is going to be tough. But there are a few that stick out. Part of all, Westminster blocked a field goal that would have given Thomas More the lead late in the game, that was incredible. The Titans then converted on third and long with an electrifying reverse where Dom McKinley picked the ball while being tackled to JoJo Bentley for a 35-yard run. That drive forced a fumble and recovered it on 74's first possession of overtime. Finally, the most exciting part was the successful field goal by Cybak off to give Westminster the win!"

(DON’T BE SURPRISED WHEN IT’S TRUE—WE'RE THAT GOOD)

Virgo
It’s time to bunker down. You may feel like things are picking up, because they are. Don’t be intimidated. You can take it, and weather the storm. Once the storm clears out you will feel like a new person.

Scorpio
Feeling cooped up lately? Get out and do something. Try going to a movie this weekend in Muller. This weekend is homecoming so you could always go to the football game or check out the parade.

Sagittarius
This is your week. You’ve been on top of your game, but don’t let it go to your head. Everything is great right now, but you still have to work to keep on the way you do.

Aquarius
Finances are tight, and maybe they’ve been stressing you out. Use a spreadsheet, or some tracker to watch spending and help plan out expenses. It will all work out one way or another. In the end do not let money stop you from enjoying life.

Libra
This week has been filled with highs and lows. You may want to burst out, but just hold out until the weekend. Deep breathing and counting to ten will help you not break your knuckles on the wall.

Leo
This dreary weather has been getting you down. Make the most of it though! If you can’t necessarily get outside and do something, hang out with friends, or cuddle up in bed and watch some netflix or read a book.

Cancer
This week has been a rough one. Keep your head up! You are going to do great in the upcoming weeks. You can’t worry all the time. Enjoy the little things, and when it is time to work do your best, and you won’t be able to doubt yourself.

Gemini
Don’t limit your capabilities or be afraid to try new things. This week has presented you with opportunities to step outside your comfort zone. Do what is comfortable but don’t be afraid to try something different.

Taurus
This week has been trying your health. It’s about that time of the year for everyone to be passing around the flu. Stay healthy! Drink water, make sure you’re getting sleep in your busy schedule, and remember the health center exists.

Capricorn
A lot of people have been relying on you this week. Don’t forget to take care of yourself. It is great to be compassionate toward others, but don’t let yourself fall behind because of it.

Relationships with friends have been becoming difficult. Do not spread yourself too thin this week. Take the weekend to figure everything out. You know who you are.

Capricorn
A lot of people have been relying on you this week. Don’t forget to take care of yourself. It is great to be compassionate toward others, but don’t let yourself fall behind because of it.

Leo
This dreary weather has been getting you down. Make the most of it though! If you can’t necessarily get outside and do something, hang out with friends, or cuddle up in bed and watch some netflix or read a book.

Cancer
This week has been a rough one. Keep your head up! You are going to do great in the upcoming weeks. You can’t worry all the time. Enjoy the little things, and when it is time to work do your best, and you won’t be able to doubt yourself.

Gemini
Don’t limit your capabilities or be afraid to try new things. This week has presented you with opportunities to step outside your comfort zone. Do what is comfortable but don’t be afraid to try something different.

Taurus
This week has been trying your health. It’s about that time of the year for everyone to be passing around the flu. Stay healthy! Drink water, make sure you’re getting sleep in your busy schedule, and remember the health center exists.

Libra
This week has been filled with highs and lows. You may want to burst out, but just hold out until the weekend. Deep breathing and counting to ten will help you not break your knuckles on the wall.

Pisces
Relationships with friends have been becoming difficult. Do not spread yourself too thin this week. Take the weekend to figure everything out. You know who you are.

Aries
This week has been one of your busiest. It feels like you’re drowning in responsibilities. Just remember what Dory from Finding Nemo said, “Just keep swimming.” Also don’t get consumed by all of your work. You deserve some free time every once in awhile.
